CULTIVATING VACANT LOTS

Vacant lot gardening has greatly increased in Philadelphia during the last year. More than six hundred families were engaged in the healthful and remunerative work of cultivating the spaces of idle land in various sections of the city. The work is carried on under the direction of the Philadelphia Vacant Lot Cultivation association. Since its organization in 1897 this organization has accomplished much in affording opportunity for self-help in Philadelphia. It secures the temporary use of idle land and assigns gardening thereon to people who are in need of money, as well as a healthful occupation. Not only by this scheme is a chance for healthful and profitable work afforded, but it prevents these vacant spaces from being used as unsightly dumping grounds.

Life Jobs on a Farm.

A farm for the benefit of "silver" or unskilled workmen thrown out of employment by the completion of the Panama canal has been established by the government on the Canal zone. There are now about one hundred men on this farm, all of whom are earning a comfortable living for themselves. Nearly all these farmers are crippled, some having lost an arm or a leg or having been incapacitated in some other way for hard work. The farm grows bananas, oranges, coconuts and other tropical products and is stocked with cows, chickens, ducks and pigs. It is managed by the medical corps of the United States army. Each workman is to have a life job on the farm.

How to Clean Up Yards.

It has remained for a picture show man to clean up a Kansas town in a most effective way, and by a simple method. He offered a free ticket to his show for a limited time to any boy who could bring a certificate from his mother that he had thoroughly cleaned up the back yard, and some three hundred boys—about all there are in the town—got on the job. There are great possibilities in a scheme of that kind; it can be made to do almost anything.

KEEPS TREES IN CONDITION TRIBUTE PAID TO SOCIETIES

A very ingenious and practical device for assuring the trees on city sidewalks a sufficient supply of water, no matter how dry the season and how hard baked the earth, has recently been put in operation in Strasburg by Mr. Sauer, the city tree inspector. It consists of a tube of iron or lead bent into the form of a ring large enough to encircle the stem of the tree. The earth is removed so that this ring may be placed just above the roots, and is then filled in again, leaving the end of a pipe connecting with the ring projecting above the surface of the ground. The top of the ring is pierced with a large number of small holes, and a tin cover or shield prevents these from becoming stopped up with earth. By means of a funnel in the protruding end of the pipe any desired amount of water may be supplied to the roots without waste or loss of time. A further advantage, according to Promeister, is the ventilation thus secured of the earth in the vicinity of the roots.

In looking over an old work of Peter Henderson, written about forty years ago, we find this beautiful "plan" on New York city: "In New York and its suburbs the taste is much lower than it is in either Boston or Philadelphia. In those places, no doubt their excellent horticultural societies have done much to refine the tastes of the people, and it is to be regretted that neither New York nor its adjacent cities, with probably over two million people, have a single horticultural or floricultural society." At the present day, this distinction is none the less clear, and where these societies best flourish the highest appreciation of plant life is shown. There are better gardens, better gardeners, more varied plant life and more rare and costly plants in Pasadena than in any other city on the Pacific coast; also less crime and a higher standard of citizenship.—Los Angeles Times.
